Rocking chairs at Camp Mokule'ia sit ready to welcome military families for a respite weekend in May.

Churches identify needs of military families

Ministry among the Armed Forces is everyday ministry at St. George's, said Maj. John A. Bernhart, Bishop's Warden at the Pearl Harbor church, at a January meeting to discuss the church's ministry to deployed military personnel and their families. St. George's, located on U.S. Naval base property, serves members from all branches of the military.

However, other Episcopal churches scattered across Oahu also find themselves welcoming and pastoring military families. Tens of thousands of military live in the islands, mostly on Oahu.

Large numbers of Hawai'i National Guard units serve in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"Churches with a significant ministry among the military or near military bases met to decide how we should do a better job reaching out to military and their families," said Bishop Richard Chang.

The Family Camp at Mokule'ia in May for families with a deployed member in Iraq or Afghanistan was a direct result of this conversation. (see companion article). Also the group proposed to advertise in a military Welcome Book, given to all families stationed in Hawai'i. Congregations discussed what they now are doing to welcome and aid such families.

St. Stephens' in Wahiawa, near Schofield Barracks, has developed programs to complement Schofield programs, such as providing anger management classes.

St. Timothy's in Aiea, has a Peace Altar with prayers for the deployed and their families. St. Peter's in Honolulu, has seen an increase in single military persons attending church and has

Today more than 3,000 military men and women from our Hawai'i 'ohana are deployed around the world in support of our nation's freedoms. Of special note are those deployed for a year in Iraq and Afghanistan. More than 2,000 of these are Hawai'i's own Army and Air National Guards and Army Reserve soldiers serving in the 29th Brigade Combat Team and the 100th Battalion/442d Infantry and from the Fleet Marine Force Pacific.

Some of these families may be members of your church community.

St. Andrew's Cathedral, Camp Mokule'ia, and several congregations of the diocese are committed to keep these military forces and their families in our prayers and have joined together to sponsor a free weekend to "Support the Families" at Camp Mokule'ia in May.

The weekend is free for any attending family. Individuals and other congregations who wish to support this endeavor are encouraged and contributions are invited.

The camp will focus on being a respite period. Childcare, various activities and all meals and lodging will be provided at no cost to the families. The

Share your Easter story with others

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,
What is your favorite story or memory of Easter? The fifty days of Easter is a wonderful time to remember, retell, and reflect on the Easter story in our lives.

Colored hardboiled eggs were not part of any Easter celebration during my childhood since we were not Christians.
In keeping with Chinese custom, my parents prepared packages for all the people who had given gifts when my sister was born. When my sister was one month old, they distributed to each family a package containing a piece of roast pork, oranges, pickled ginger, and red eggs. I have been told that they did the same when I was one month old. As a two-year-old, I was fascinated when my mother boiled and colored of all those eggs red.

From my childhood and cultural roots
I now dye all eggs red when I am allowed to color Easter eggs. No one in my family appreciates this, so I am limited in my participation in this family project.

When our daughters were young, I found a book on Easter symbols that told about the first Easter eggs. I pointed out to Holly and Hannah that the Orthodox colored their Easter eggs red symbolizing the blood of the Lamb. Even that did not convince them that Dad was following ancient church practice when we had only red eggs.

So every Easter, whether the girls are with us, the struggle of all red eggs continues in our house. It is a story that is repeated annually. The story and experience of Dad's red eggs have become part of our family identity and lore.

The other Easter story that has been an important part of our lives is the road to Emmaus. We are all familiar with this story of the post-resurrection appearance

The Right Rev.
Richard S.O. Chang
BISHOP OF HAWAII

of the Risen Christ to two of the disciples.
They fail to recognize the presence of Christ until they stop for the night and Christ breaks bread.

In our living room we have a large Sadao Watanabe print entitled, "The Road to Emmaus." It has always been hung somewhere between our living and dining rooms of every home that we have lived in for the past 35 years. It reminds us of Jesus' post-Easter appearance. It reminds us that we must be prepared for meeting and welcoming the Christ in those who enter our home or sit at table with us. It reminds us that we may be the Christ for others in our home or at our table. In the table fellowship of our home, we strive to mirror the communion fellowship of the Holy Table. We know that we are fed spiritually and physically at both tables.

What is your own Easter story? What passage of the Easter gospel shapes your faith as a person of the Easter Community, the Church? What is your story of faith? What other story have you heard from other people of your congregation, of our diocese and of the wider Church? I encourage you to tell your "Easter story" of faith with others during these fifty days of Easter. Proclaim the good news of the resurrection by your telling of your Easter story with boldness.

Serving the hungry in Hawai'i: Mission Fund 2005

By Cecilia Fordham

Several events in March have underscored the need in our communities for focus on serving the Hungry in Hawai'i.

On Maui, food supplies were lost in the Salvation Army fire in Kahului. Other agencies will have to pick up the slack.
On O'ahu, the Palama Salvation Army food pantry closed its doors when it found its cupboards bare and had to refer its clients to other neighborhood food programs.

Families must make decisions every day whether to pay the rent or buy food.

Mission Fund 2005 provides us with an opportunity to help throughout our Hawai'i community. "What should we be doing?"

A few suggestions:

• Announce and explain the Mission Fund 2005 theme in church on Sunday, "Serving the Hungry in Hawai'i". Use the information sent in the e-blasts (available from clergy and lay leaders). Post the Chronicle articles. Highlight the work of the group in your church that runs or is engaged with the food program through Pentecost. Please donate $1

Hawai'i"

- Choose a person or group in the congregation to head up the effort in your congregation. Tell us who the point person or group is so we can add them to the list to receive information.

- Be sure vestry/bishop's committees and congregations are informed about the Mission Fund 2005, the important dates for the ingathering and nomination of an agency or program to receive money, the distribution of collection envelopes in your congregation, and who to call to find out more.

- Identify the hungry in your community. Could groups in your community reach more people if they worked to-

Anglican monastics bring spirit-filled week to Honolulu

By Liz Zivanov

The Parish of St. Clement hosted a weeklong Lenten series on spiritual growth and development. Thanks to a kind bequest from the late Alice Rogers, a long-time member of the parish, the vestry endowed the Alice Rogers Spirituality Series, which will support an annual event relating to spirituality.

This year, St. Clement's hosted three Anglican monastics: Brother Robert Sevinsky of the Order of the Holy Cross, the Rev. Mother Carolyn Darr and Sister Sarah Margaret Randall of the Society of St. Margaret.

The week included a variety of offerings, starting with a presentation on spirituality and spiritual direction. Retreats were held for men and for women, sessions were given on family spirituality and how to pray, and throughout the week, parishioners met with the three visitors for individual spiritual direction. The monastics also met with various Christian formation groups on Sunday, and Sr. Sarah made a visit to a journalism class at St. Andrew's Priory School for Girls.

Reactions from those who participated were quite positive. Because so many want to do follow-up on what they learned, the parish is considering how to continue to support the corporate and individual spiritual needs between visits of the monastics.

The 2006 Alice Rogers Spirituality Series will host the Rev. Dr. Peter Gomes, author, preacher, and chaplain of the Harvard Memorial Chapel, along with a return visit by Sr. Carolyn.

Our 'common ground'

There is more to the Episcopal faith than sitting in the pew Sunday mornings. Ask questions, get involved and inspired by the open-minded, "middle road" or "common ground" of Christianity through a program of Anglican education, Via Media.

The 7-week course includes videos, conversation, and food, and a safe place to ask all the questions you'd want to ask about your faith and spiritual journey. This course is open to all.

Sessions are on Wednesdays, April 6 through May 18, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at St. Clement's parish house. Dinner included and childcare is provided. A $35 donation is asked. To sign up call St. Clement's: 955-7745. For more information, contact Stuart Coleman: scoleman34@aol.com.

Experience 'Journey' in your parish

The Diocese of Hawai'i has named adult Christian formation a top priority. How do we realize this goal in a way that is true to our Episcopal heritage and captures the spirit of each congregation?

At use in the diocese is a process as old as Christianity itself and as new as the creative ideas of the leaders of each session—the Catechumenal Process, known simply as, "Journey." At its core are the vows and promises of the Baptismal Covenant that define the life and ministry Christians embrace when initiated into the Body of Christ, the church.

St. Andrew's Cathedral, with the Commission on Ministry and Diocesan Christian Formation Committee, is offering an introductory two-day workshop for the Catechumenal Process in May (see box).

The workshop is open to all who would like to experience "Journey" and to congregational teams that would like to consider using the process in their congregations.

The Catechumenal Process was adapted for use in the Episcopal Church by the Very Rev. Ann McElligott.

in the congregation lead weekly sessions with the active support of the clergy. Liturgies, geared to the celebrations of the church year, involve participants and the entire congregation.

St. Andrew's is in its second year of the Catechumenal Process. It is called "Journey" because it describes what happens in the process. The name "Journey" acknowledges that one is always a wayfarer on a pilgrimage with, in, and to God.

"Leaders have been amazed at the resources and gifts they have discovered in themselves and by the commitment of the participants," McElligott says.

While "Journey" supports faith formation in the daily lives of all people, it begins with those who are already active members of a congregation. Taking part in "Journey" often strengthens personal ministries and provides an opportunity to support others in ministry.

intent is to enable up to 50 families of deployed military members to enjoy a stress free weekend and fun time for the families.

Although there will be no attempt to duplicate any of the existing military and family support systems already in place, there will be qualified facilitators present for any discussions that may occur.

The camp will not have a "religious" format except for prayers at meals and other appropriate occasions, a service on Sunday, and perhaps discussions that may come up spontaneously. Some of the families coming may not be church-oriented and this may be a new experience for them.

Congregations were asked in March to identify families. The only criteria are that the families nominated must have a member of their household deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan in May.

A "family" may be a single spouse, a spouse with children, parent(s), legal guardian of minor children, etc. The intent of the Camp weekend is to support families regardless of how that family is defined by the deployed family member.

Neighbor island families are welcome. Their round trip airfare will be free.
